

ABSTRACT

A turbine blade or vane comprises an impingement tube located generally in a radial direction within the blade or vane aerofoil, the impingement tube comprising two parts, extending into the blade or vane from opposite radial ends thereof and locating against a specially formed rib which extends generally chordwise around the leading edge of the aerofoil.